Learning Objectives:

At the conclusion of this activity, participants should be able to:

- Recognize the diversity within the region's plain community
- Identify aspects of plain community culture relevant to delivering effective patient care
- Identify distinctive issues affecting how plain community members regard health and wellbeing
- Describe the prevalence and unique diagnosis and management strategies for highly genetic cardiovascular conditions (familial hypercholesterolemia and long QT syndrome) that have reached a high prevalence in the Lancaster Old Order Amish due to a genetic founder effect.
- Define the Plain Insight Panel (PIP) and describe ways that it can benefit a family in both the screening for and diagnosis of genetically-related chronic conditions
- Determine when to direct patients to the Clinic for Special Children for blood work and describe the counseling they will receive regarding the results of this testing.
- Identify barriers and methods to improve chronic care management and prevention within the Plain communities.
- Describe the impact on the community and the family's resilience and courage as they face caring for their infant while knowing their baby has a terminal illness
